THE THREE GRACES

We have the picture of you in mind, when you were young, posturing (for a photographer) in scarves (if you could have done it). But now, for none of you is immortal, ninety three, the three, ninety and three, Mary, Ellen and Emily, what beauty is it clings still about you? Undying? Magical? For there is still no answer, why we live or why you will not live longer than I or that there be an answer why any should live and whatever other should die. Yet you live.
